Certification should be generally more rigorous than it currently is -- particularly if we can make it more efficient.

Agree:

Disagree:

A promising direction to facilitate innovation is to create some way to certify new or experimental voting systems for limited use in live elections, with a significantly lower bar for approval -- perhaps even waive certification in these cases.

Agree:

Disagree:

Allowing white-hat attackers to try to hack our voting systems during live public elections might improve election security, privacy, and/or integrity, by giving the "good guys" a way to test the system, under realistic situations.
